

DAHLIA WOODS GALLERY

'Perchance to Dream'

Midnight Storm Rolling Into Venice by Skip Noah

Skip Noah, say the folks over at the Dahlia Woods Gallery, "paints jewel-like cityscapes and dream images, creating a magical otherworld and transporting the viewer into deep inner space." Noah is an Austin artist whose work has also been shown at the Quorum Gallery in Addison, Gallery 64 in Brooklyn, N.Y., and at the Bath House Cultural Center and Craighead-Green Gallery in Dallas (he was part of the 2003 "New Texas Talent" show at Craighead-

Green). In addition to Noah's "dream paintings," the Dahlia Woods Gallery is featuring, in its annex, Camille Woods' surrealistic landscapes, inspired by the big sky country of rural Texas, which gallery officials say "capture the emptiness in which we drift searching for human connections."
